For statutorily health-insured persons: how to get up to 100% of the costs reimbursed:

Step 1: Submit to statutory health insurance (2 Options)

- Doctor submits invoice: With your consent, your doctor can send the invoice directly to your statutory health insurance.
- You submit the invoice: Copy, scan, or photograph the original invoice. Send it to your statutory health insurance requesting reimbursement. This can also be done online.

Step 2: Submit to UNIQA

In both cases, send the statutory health insurance reimbursement statement along with a copy of the invoice to UNIQA. Submitting simultaneously to statutory health insurance and UNIQA is not permitted.

Important: If you first submit to UNIQA and receive reimbursement, you may not submit the same invoice to your statutory health insurance afterward.

Please note:

- We transfer to the bank account you provide. Always state your policy number when contacting us.
- Original invoices must be kept for at least one year and presented if requested.
- Combined reimbursements from your statutory health insurance and private insurance may not exceed 100% of costs.
- Avoid letting invoices pile up. Especially thermal-paper receipts (e.g., from pharmacies) fade quickly. Send documents as soon as they're complete to ensure faster reimbursement and avoid expiration after 3 years.
- Submit invoices separately for each insured person.

B. Supplementary insurance terms and conditions

1.(a) The general waiting period is waived.

(b) the special waiting period is 9 months for childbirth, miscarriage, pregnancy examinations and illnesses, and their consequences. Coverage applies to premature or miscarriages that would have otherwise led to a full-term birth.

2. Strength training as well as medical training (individual or group training), even if conducted under medical supervision, do not constitute medical treatment and therefore do not fall under insurance coverage. The same applies to dyslexia training, dyscalculia training, remedial pedagogy, and training therapy carried out by sports scientists.

3. Memberships, subscriptions, and monthly fees are not covered.

4. Conventional medicine refers to medicine taught at universities and academic institutions and recognized and established in general. It is based on scientific theories and findings secured through studies. Conventional medical procedures are applied exclusively by persons belonging to healthcare professions – only they are authorized in Austria to make diagnoses and to treat patients for an illness.

5. Alternative medicine (complementary medicine) is a collective term for therapeutic procedures outside established medicine (conventional medicine). These procedures are used in addition to established medicine. Complementary medical methods are based on models of disease development and treatment different from conventional medicine. This is an important distinguishing feature from medical procedures that are used in unconventional ways.

6. In addition to Section 2.1.b) of the General Conditions of Insurance for Medical Expenses and Hospital Daily Allowance Insurance, aesthetic treatments and operations are not covered by insurance. Aesthetic treatments/operations include in particular: abdominoplasty, brow correction, breast lift (mastopexy), breast augmentation (mamma augmentation) and breast reduction (mamma reduction), autologous fat transfer (lipofilling), facelift (rhytidectomy), liposuction, gluteal modeling, facial implants, neck lift, chin correction (genioplasty), body lift, correction of protruding ears (otoplasty), lip enlargement and lip augmentation, rhinoplasty, arm lift (brachioplasty), thigh lift (dermolipectomy), penis enlargement, forehead lift, vaginoplasty and labiaplasty – insofar as these measures do not serve the elimination of consequences of an accident.

7. Where an additional entitlement to benefits exists under an inpatient tariff, the benefit is primarily provided from the inpatient tariff and any further possible benefits from the outpatient tariff. In no case shall more than the actual costs incurred be reimbursed.

8. The basis for calculating the insurance benefits available under the tariff is the costs incurred prior to deduction of benefits from statutory health insurance.

9. The annual maximum amounts specified in these tariff provisions are available exclusively for the respective services indicated.

10. Any deductible under a special class tariff shall in no case be reimbursed.

11. If an insured child has reached the age of 18, we are entitled to increase the premium to the amount provided in the respective tariff for insured persons entering the insurance at this age (see also Section B 3. Changes of premium or insurance coverage).

C. Changes to the premium or insurance coverage

1. We are entitled to change the premium or the insurance coverage unilaterally after the contract has been concluded. Relevant circumstances for changes to the premium or coverage are changes in the following factors:

1.1. the Consumer Price Index (CPI) 2015 published by "Statistics Austria" (Statistik Austria);

1.2. the average life expectancy;

1.3. the frequency of utilization of benefits according to the type contractually provided for and their costliness, in relation to the insured persons under this tariff;

1.4. the ratio between the contractually agreed benefits and the corresponding reimbursements of statutory health insurance;

1.5. the fees fixed by law, regulation, other official act or by contract between the insurer and the healthcare institutions designated in the insurance contract for the utilization of these institutions; and

1.6. the healthcare system and the statutory provisions applicable to it.

1.7. in the case of group insurance, in addition to the circumstances stated in 1.1 to 1.6: also a change of the circumstances mentioned in 1.2 and 1.3 solely among the insured persons belonging to this group, including as a result of a change in the average age of the group.

2. The declaration of change of the premium or insurance coverage in accordance with item 1 becomes effective only from the first day of the month following dispatch. If we increase the premium pursuant to item 1, we shall, at the request of the policyholder (in group insurance the principal insured), offer continuation of the contract with at most unchanged premium and appropriately adjusted benefits.

3. If an insured child has reached the age of 18, then from the first day of the month following the 18th birthday the premium shall be increased to the amount provided under this tariff (see designation of tariff in heading of the first page), taking into account interim adjustments pursuant to §178f paragraph 2 VersVG, for insured persons entering the insurance at this age. We shall notify the policyholder (in group insurance the principal insured) of such a premium increase at least one month prior to its effectiveness, informing them of the increased premium and granting them the option to terminate the insurance contract, with respect to the person affected by the premium increase, within four weeks from receipt of the notification, in which case the premium increase shall not take effect. In group insurance we may, together with the policyholder (group contract partner), agree on another age relevant for the premium increase, provided this age may not exceed 20 years.

4. Declarations of change of premium or insurance coverage in accordance with item 1 take place four times annually on the following dates: 1 February, 1 March, 1 May, and 1 August. In group insurance the adjustment may, by agreement with the policyholder, deviate from the dates stated above.

5. If Statistik Austria ceases publication of the index agreed in item 1.1, it shall be replaced by the index designated by Statistik Austria as its successor index; in the absence of such a successor index, by that index published by Statistik Austria or its successor organization which most closely corresponds to the index according to item 1.1.

6. Adjustment of premiums may result in substantial increases during the contract period.
